SHORT TERM

You're young, carefree and probably think you're going to live forever. At this point, life insurance is just something for old people to think about, right?

College is over and it's time to grow up, enter the "real world" and earn a living. Maybe you're married or have children or others who depend on you financially. Life insurance rates are generally cheapest when you are relatively young and healthy.

So why wait until later, when you'll likely pay more?

Congrats on getting that big promotion at work and the increased salary that comes with it. You have a home mortgage to pay off, some credit card debt and your kids are going to need braces someday.

Who would take care of them if you died?

You may be feeling your age a bit more, but a sore back doesn't mean you're ready to settle into a 55-and-over retirement village any time soon, either. You're an empty nester now, so you may be ready to adjust your life insurance coverage amount. Retirement is right around the corner.

Are you and your spouse financially prepared?

You're facing more serious health concerns now, which make finding affordable life insurance challenging. You're wishing you had bought life insurance way back when you were healthier and the rates were lower. Life insurance premiums for you now are expensive, if you can find coverage at any price.
